Francis W. Parker School
330 Webster Avenue

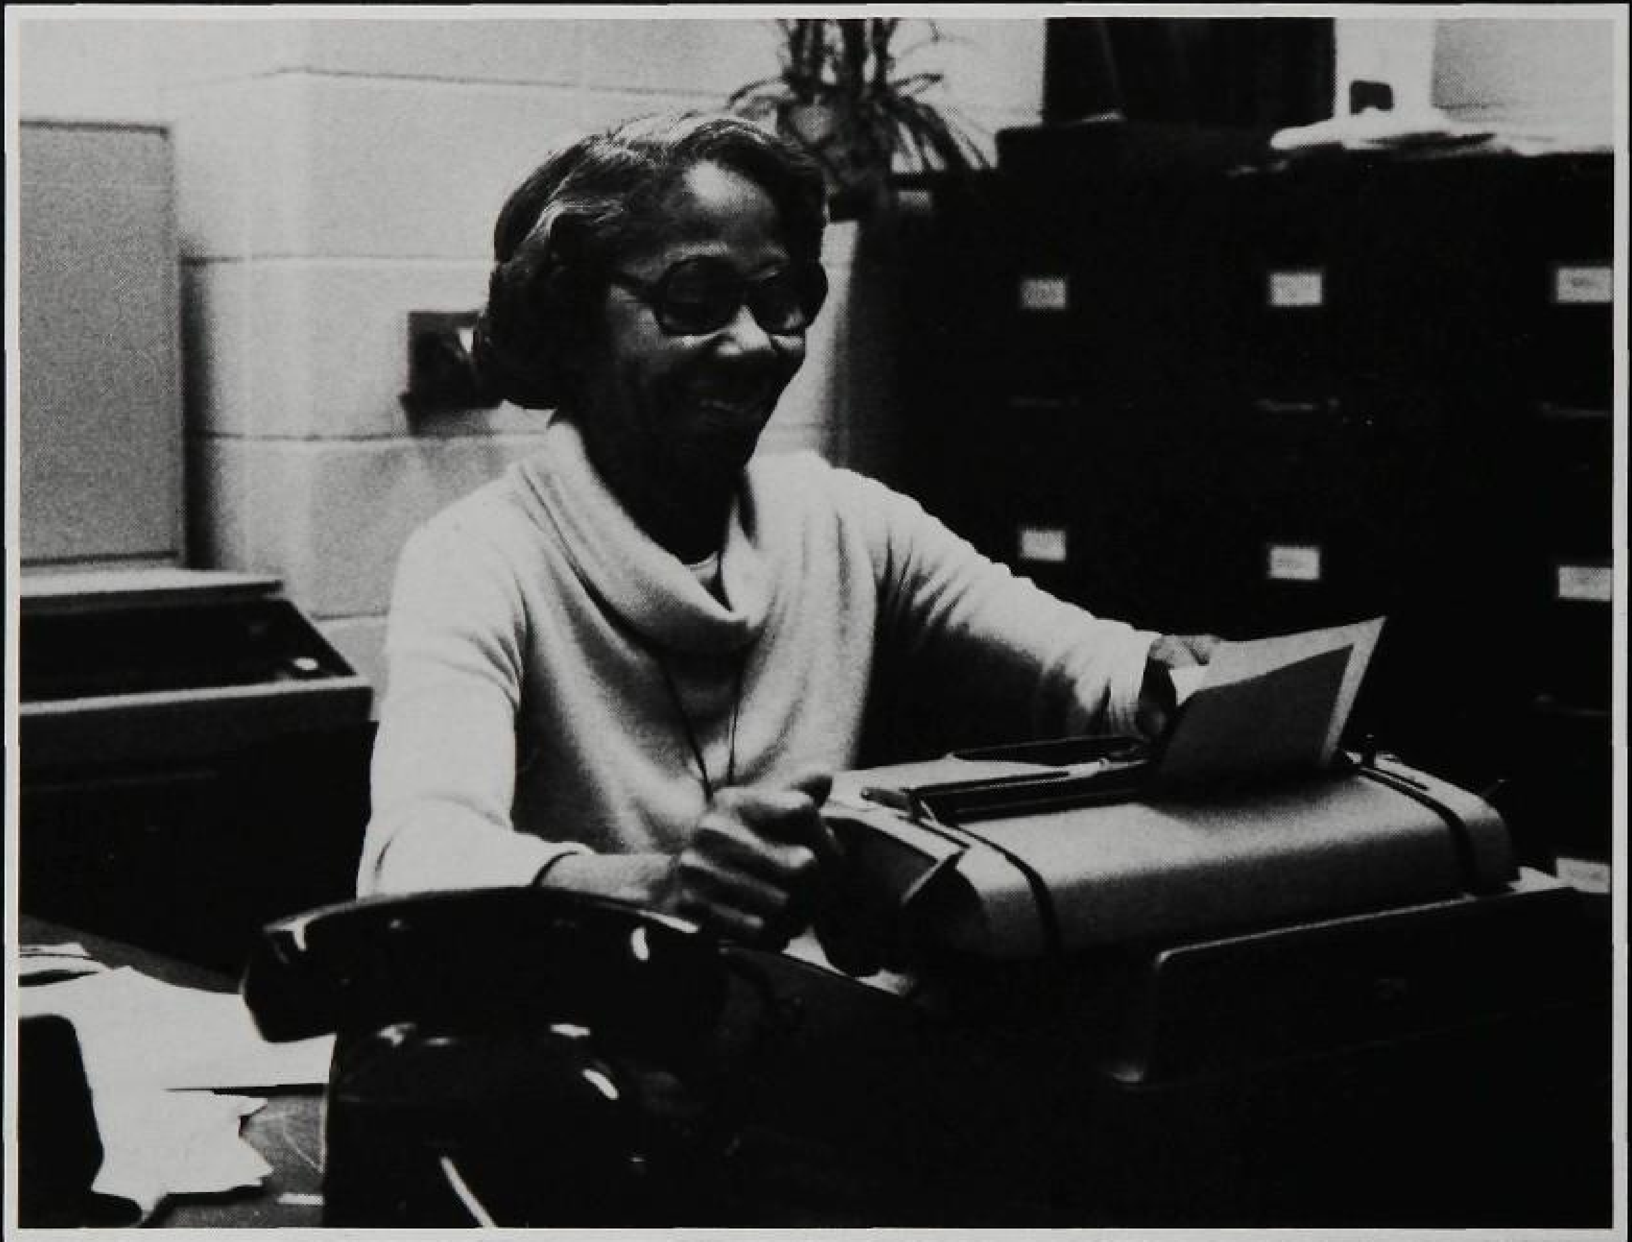
Dedication

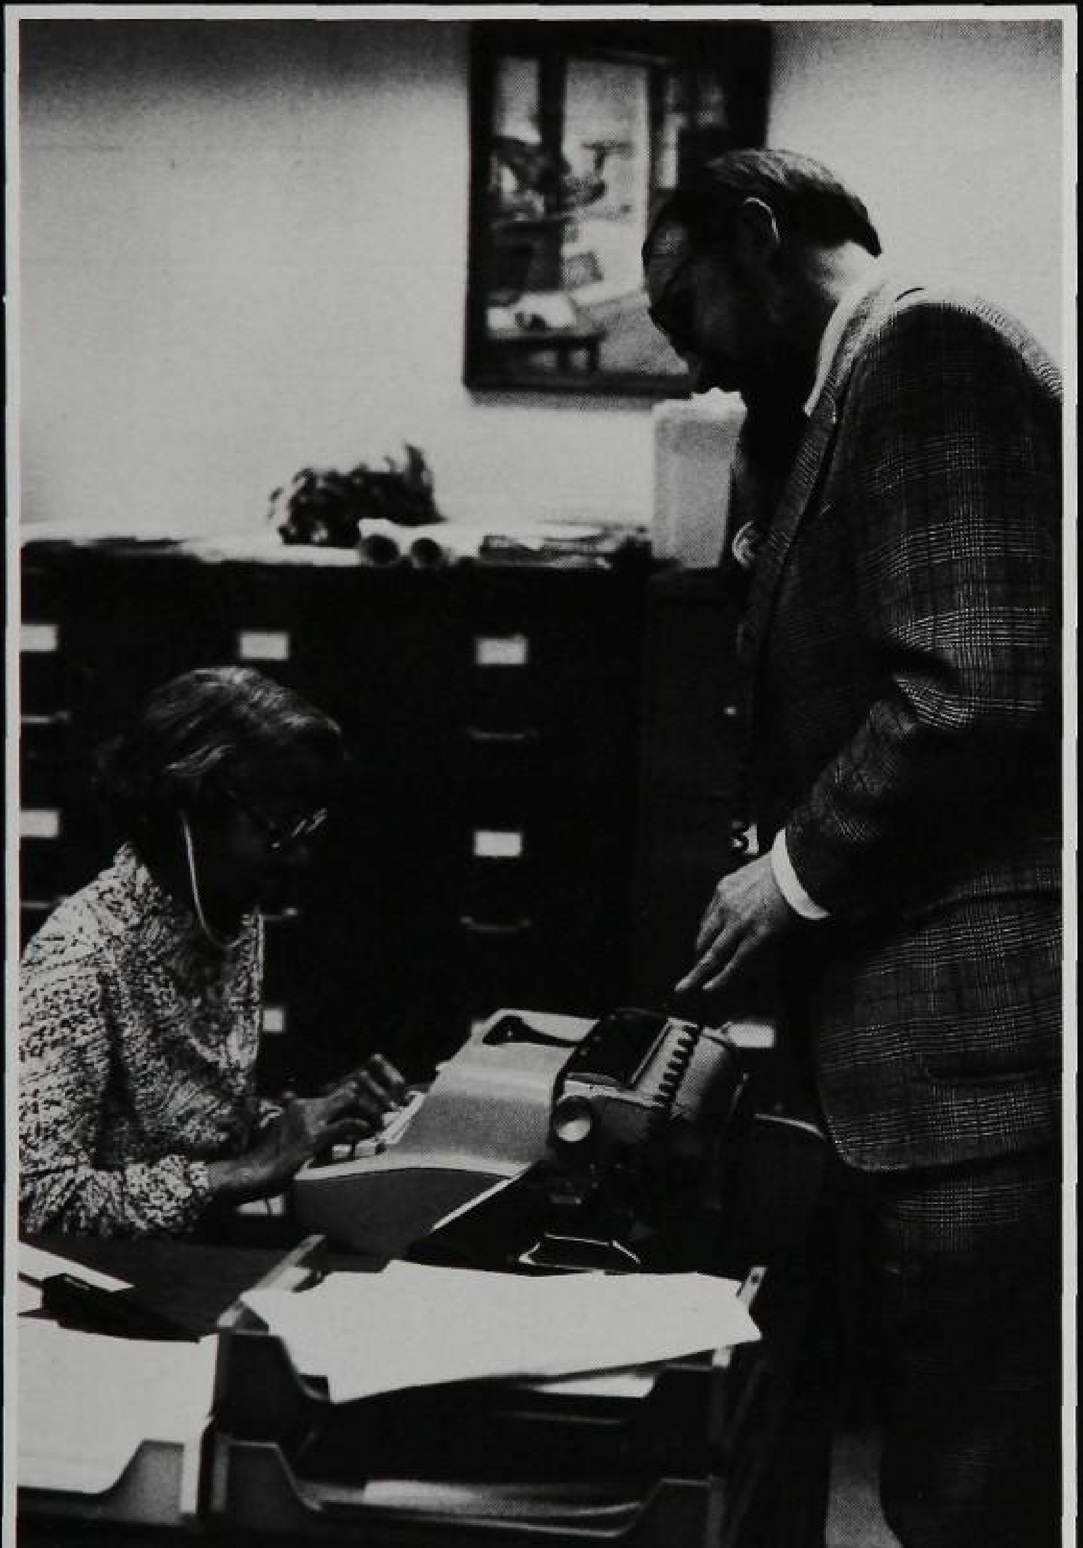


Each year we honor some one whose care and dedication has earned back the love and respect that makes the Parker family special. We pride ourselves on our vital community in which the ideas of great thinkers both past and present go into the education of the whole child. But the heart and soul of our community is caring individuals who make Parker a place people will enjoy coming to every day. From the school's beginning, special individuals have devoted years of their lives to this institution, very often helping to create a school good enough for their own children. It is just such an individual whom we wish to honor in this, her final year at Francis Parker.

Her twenty-four years of service began back in 1958, when she started working in the senior kindergarten, just as her oldest child began junior kindergarten. She spent eleven years with kindergarteners and gradually took on responsibilities in the Business Office as well. After leaving the lower schoolers she devoted full-time to work in the Administration; first as head of the mimeo office, then as secretary to the head of the lower school, and finally as secretary to the Principal.

In her years here, all four of her children have attended Parker, including one who returned and currently teaches fifth grade. All five of her grandchildren have also come here, two of whom graduated last year after fourteen years. Hers has been a remarkable commitment of time, trust, and love to this school. It is with great pleasure that the editors of this eightieth anniversary Record dedicate the 1982 edition to Eleanor Williams.

Eleanor Williams



In accumulating property for ourselves or our posterity, in founding a family or a state, or acquiring fame even, we are mortal; but in dealing with the truth we are immortal, and need fear no change nor accident. The oldest Egyptian or Hindoo philosopher raised a corner of the veil from the statue of the divinity; and still the trembling robe remains raised, and I gaze upon as fresh a glory as he did, since it was I in him that was then so bold, and it is he in me that now reviews the vision. No dust has settled on that robe; no time has elapsed since that divinity was revealed. That time which we really improve, or which is improvable, is neither past, present, nor future.

After Eighty Years, the Parker Experiment Continues

Parker in the 1910's was an extraordinarily daring school. It was during those years that we began to print the Weekly on a hand press. Sophomore boys learned chemistry and French, but also how to lay concrete and cement sidewalks. We were experimenters, breaking away from the rigid educational structures of the nineteenth century. Today it seems almost a conventional idea, but building a school so as to utilize a zoo was once a revolutionary notion. Seventy years ago you just did not go to the zoo until after school.

The joy of our photographs of the old Parker is seeing how closely we resemble those Parker Pioneers. We see boys sporting neckties and girls in dresses, but these are merely styles which have changed. These photos show us that seventy years ago Parker students were much the same as we are today. We see ourselves making wooden bowls in the old shop or dashing wildly down the hallway presumably trying to reach graderoom on time.

The Parker atmosphere has not changed. Our pictures show seniors playing with their little brothers and sisters and teachers joking with their pupils in the same informal way we are used to. These plates betray no old world rigidity or insistence on ceremony. Rather, the pervading mood is one of a summer camp or community project. The school works and plays, preserving an extraordinary thing, an education created not by a school structure but by the individuals who are the substance of our school.

Between the fedoras and high starched collars, the Parker faces are the same. We see our friends and teachers as they would have looked during Woodrow Wilson's day. And rising from the middle of a spacious neighborhood occupied only by Reebie Van Lines and a few prairie houses is the comforting structure of the old building. Looking more like a Lake Shore mansion than an educational institution, the old building was a link to our history. When we replaced it, we severed a tangible bond to our founders and their dreams.

We remember our history through these photographs. They reaffirm our tradition and must serve to remind us of the days when it was a struggle to keep Parker school alive. We hope that our photographs will never permit us to forget the progressive experiment we are embarked upon.

The old building looked more like a Lake Shore mansion than a school.

Seniors Meet New Friends

A few minutes of waiting in the little gym, and we, giddy with excitement, hear the first bar of music. Finally, arms linked with our fellow seniors, we march past each grade until we come to our seats of honor.

Thirteen times I have witnessed this Parker phenomenon — from the first year — sitting on the floor in the first row and gazing up in rapture at the omniscient and mysterious seniors, to the eleventh year, wondering what all the fuss is about anyway: and at last, to the twelfth year, now gazing down at the mysterious and wonderful eyes looking up from the first row.

Olympics Come To Parker

It was the Olympics 1981! A five-ring circus in all its multicultured, multicolored splendor. From Junior Kindergarten Irish popcorn to the traditional tenth grade Chinese auction, the spirit of international cooperation abounded - except, of course, for the Senior-Junior battle. A new flavor enhanced their rivalry this year, as Russian Chicken Kiev competed with "the Greatest American Hot Dog". For the most part, however, County Fair was unchanged: an active, happy get-together for the entire school, full of food, balloons, smiles, and community spirit.

Fall Play Creates Suspense

Wait Until Dark touched off this year's program of major drama productions with a bang and a scream. The suspenseful adventure had audiences squirming as the villain attacked and the herione momentarily faltered. When the blind Suzy finally overcame her sadistic foe, the sigh of relief was nearly audible, (from the cast as well as the audience).

Wait Until Dark is an "unusually difficult" play for a high school to perform, said director Dan Reichel. The intricate set and complicated lighting make this year's a "notable achievement". Both the cast and the crew dedicated themselves to the production during an exceptionally short production period; their reward was the quality of the show.

Who Was That Masked Man?

Halloween was highlighted by the lower school parade, complete with multicolored costumes, winding its way throughout the school. The lower schoolers march to show other students, particularly the upperclassmen, their costume creations and to see the costumes of others. When the procession passes, all classes halt. Older students watch their younger counterparts happily doing as they had done years before. Seniors find their little brothers and sisters and march with them; the young lower schoolers gaze admiringly upon the elder statesmen of the school. Halloween is a time to adopt a costume, a special time which brings together the whole school.

Twelve Days of Christmas

Senior Performance Receives Standing Ovation

Since 1950, the senior class has performed the Twelve Days of Christmas at the annual Christmas party. The story involves an unsuspecting Belgian princess being mobbed by strange and exotic gifts on each of the twelve days of Christmas. Every senior portrays a character involved in the gift giving. The clever prince looks on, amazed that both he and the seniors are able to pull off such an event.

Preparation for the performance began only a week earlier with the often delicate process of part selection. Everyone has a different reason for the part they select, many preferring to receive the kiss as one of the first seven gifts over the glory of a super-lord-a-leapin', the glamour of a milking maid, the $50 an hour received by the plumbers piping, the revelations of a lady dancing, or the rhythm of one of the two-headed drummers drumming needed to complete the required dozen.

Mr. McCutcheon accompanies the class on the piano. After seniors Uncle Mistletoe and Aunt Holly introduce the performance to an awaiting audience and a sleeping Santa Claus, who Ho-ho-ho's with an Italian accent, the performance begins. The excitement overcomes the fatigue of a sleepless night, a night spent making popcorn balls. The treats serve as compensation to kindergarteners, 1st, 2nd, and 3rd graders who might prefer a partridge. The identities of the lords and ladies have so far, with a few exceptions, been kept confidential. "On the first day of Christmas, my true love gave to me . . . " sing or in some cases howl the seniors. "Five golden rings" is sung with extra emphasis for the hearing impaired and then with "and a pretty little partridge in a pair tree," it is over. Kissed by the prince, the princess is now left with the question of what to do with the gifts. Because returning is impossible, they will probably end up at the Parker Bazaar.

Is There Really Life After High School?

Senior year is the senior's year. It can be fun or arduous, short or long. It can be elusive.

The Class of 1982, though no class can accurately be categorised, has lent to the high school this year a mood of individuality, relative maturity, and conservatism. It has not been a partying year, to say the least.

The class has its frenetic comedians, its academics, its intellectuals, its weekend people, and a remarkable lack of athletes. It has cliques, apathy, and a lot of excitement, as well as fun things like college, the future, responsibility, and expectations to deal with along with all the serious stuff. (You know, premarital sex, substance abuse, creative procrastination, and, of course, the senior spank. Things like that.)

Some '82ers can't wait to leave, while others can. No one really changes when he or she becomes a senior; only the way younger people perceive them does. People you've never seen before approach you and ask whether you're going out with Loretta Sue (or Joe Bob) this Saturday, and everyone knows your name. The hardest part of being a senior, though, is that you never live up to your ideal of what a senior is. The amazing thing is the realization that the divinity of past seniors' accomplishments was simply a mirage.

The Class of 1982 is about seniors trying their hardest to have a good last year in a school that most of them have inhabited for too long. All of them want to be remembered, and for some person, the Class of 1982 will represent every thing a senior should be.

The seniors go through their last year under pressure. They are judged and judge themselves. They wax nostalgic as the end of the beginning nears. And then the Class of 1982 finishes up the year, graduates, empties out all of its lockers, and says its goodbyes, after, of course, the senior all-night bash. Everyone then disappears and the next group of rebellious zealots of Hendonious takes over, saying the same things and thinking the same thoughts as its predecessors.

With luck, a few of those seniors will survive out in the world, flourish, and do something of some worth for some person.

Still, the question of senior year is: Is there really life after high school?

Who will I be when I'm not a Parker kid?

For this is a journey that men make to find themselves. If they fail in this, it doesn't matter much what else they find. Money, position, fame, many loves, revenge are all of little consequence; and when the tickets are collected at the end of the ride, they are tossed in a bin marked failure. But if a man happens to find himself, if he knows what he can be depended upon to do, the limits of his courage, the position from which he will no longer retreat, the extent of his dedication, then he has found a mansion which he can inhabit with dignity all the days of his life.

"THWELL" ... BOBO. . . . .

Welcome to our High School

We exist in a small, decrepit, crowded hall on the third floor. It is a peach color, and the carpet is taped where it has ripped and frayed, not that we really notice these things, having lived in that peach hall for so many years. Actually, it's only four, "the best years of our lives." We rush through them so quickly, as fast as we can-tests and papers, fights and "endless loves", all jumbled into one long, disorganized, inconsistent essay.

If the question were, "What is high school like at Parker in 1982?" the answer would have to duly be that of our Student Government president, facetious Scott Zev ... "High school is a little sex, a little drugs ... " and presumably a little rock and roll. The Walkman influx, rendering every possible place - hall, morning ex, library - a cerebral desert, attests to the presence of music here.

Every year is different, yet all are the same. This year's freshman class ('85) is conservative in thought, radical in press. The sophomores ('84) have accepted their slump. The juniors are clannish, social partners. And the seniors are flowering, growing too big for such a small hall. In a sense, though, we are no different than other years. We are most attractively typical: lost, social, noisy, hectic, growing, self-centered, a (pathetically) "cool."

We in high school are paradoxes, contradictions. We discuss Fitgerald and Kafka with Duffy and Stone, Einstein with Doc. We gossip in the front hall, giggle, fall in love, cheer at games. We are simultaneously 25 and 14 years old. And our future, the real world, is depressed, uncertain.

That is Parker's high school, 1982.

Life in the Middle School

Surviving sixth through eighth grade is no small feat even at the Parker school, but those who do survive have many stories to tell.

The sixth grade is always fun. Mr. Pajkos and Dreuth are the initial guides to the adult world, for in sixth grade Parker kids begin to alter their style to fit in with more serious learning. While the sixth grade puts out the Parkerite, takes field trips, and howls in chorus, they must learn to cope with being at the bottom of the middle school pack. Overall, this year's sixth grade can sing, dance, act, talk, be loud, and play basketball like you've never seen!

Seventh grade is always banana time. Boys and girls begin to sit next to one another without throwing up and might even like each other. This year, from their archeological dig in Campsville, the seventh graders brought back this strange box that glows through its cracks and hums real loud if one ventures too close to it. Ever since Mr. Dust encountered this box in Campsville, he walks around with a bull whip, leather jacket and beard. What did they really find down there? Back here at Parker, there's also a sports program in the seventh grade. But while the girls had a basketball team that couldn't be beaten (and what seemed like fifty players on it), the boys are still wondering if the other schools they play have torture racks on which they stretch their players so much that the boys kept getting stiff necks from looking up. This year's seventh grade likes to have fun, but they do know how to work, too. They became especially interested in the issue of racism in South Africa, about which they staged a morning exercise. A new problem arises with the introduction of evaluation by letter grades, and as one teacher says, "Seventh graders are pretty competitive when it comes to grades."

The eighth grade is "so mature, I mean really." All one has to do is enter the eighth grade hall and it's like walking into the "La Coste Zone." "It don't mean a thing if it hasn't got an alligator eating a polo player on it!" It seems there were many meaningful relationships going on in the class: Most of the boys are in love with themselves, but the girls could use some "real men". Isn't eighth grade wonderful? This year the 8th grade will be going to Mars on their class trip. In class they have the ability to listen, and they really do seem eager to learn. That in itself is a sign of maturity, and individuals in the class have advanced to levels that will take them far in later life. They are a smart bunch of top bananas who never fail to let you slip on their appealing qualities . . . Robert Steffens beware!

A Nut Returns to Lower School

Lower School

J.K. - "You knocked my block castle down!"

S.K. - "Please read to us!"

First Grade - "And then Joe went to the . . . ; what does s-t-o-r-e mean?"

Second Grade - "Red rover red rover let Big Al come over."

Third Grade - "Boy! Now we can go outside and slide down the slide that will look puny to us when we're eighteen!"

Fourth Grade - "Do you have Martin or McConnel?"

These quotations come to mind when I think of my lower school years. I look back on it, and while living these busy high school days, I wish I could return and eat saltines and drink Hawiian Punch. I remember how we all had to bring our rest blankets for rest period . . . you could figure out what everyone was going to be like by what they brought. There was the kid who brought a huge down sleeping-bag (future prep), the kid who forgot to bring anything (person who will not do math homework), the kid who brings a "welcome" door-mat (will turn in homework with no name), and finally the kid who can sack-out on the floor (will always be tardy for grade-room). Since the First Grade, the teachers, have us all figured out. None of us will forget Show and tell, I'll always remember when I showed a two inch gash I had on my forehead from falling off the monkey bars. I knew our class had a well, interesting sense of humor when they were on the floor with laughter about it. I suppose the cut wasn't too big.

If you go down to the first or second grade now, you can see how the personalities of these kids are readily apparent. However, I find it strange to think how conscious they are, yet how much they will have forgotten when they are upstairs. I am a Big Brother to the first grade; they attach to me very easily. What I'd like to know is will they remember this six-foot-two-inch nut in twelve years. I want to come back to find out.

The High School Meeting Meeting Meets

With so much faculty-student interaction teachers say that they actually see much less of a dividing line between themselves and other members of the community. Though their schedules are busy with classes, meetings, and appointments, faculty members always seem to have the time to talk, help, and understand the students' problems.

This year the teachers have faced many issues in their meetings. Even before the beginning of school, they decided that exchanges to other schools would be permitted only on non-school days. In response to the tremendous opposition from the students, the faculty conceded to allow exchanges anytime we wanted . . . as long as they were faculty workshop days. The high school faculty once again affirmed that the student body should have ten votes in the High School Faculty Meetings, but decided that it would be more accurate to rename that assembly the High School meeting in order to show the working presence of students in the group. Of great importance to both faculty and students was the persistent cheating issue and the drafting of an honor code, though the two groups had difficulty agreeing on a solution.

But on a lighter side, the Senior Activities Committee was formed to design events to make the senior year more enjoyable and special. The committee now has plans under way for Mural Day, when seniors and faculty will spend a Saturday together painting the mural and sharing a barbecue. Both seniors and teachers have shown great enthusiasm for this project and look forward to spending this time together.

Colonels Win League Trophy

Led primarily by its Junior starters, this year's Varsity Soccer team finished its season with a 15-2-1 record. After losing their first game to St. Francis DeSales 2-1, the Varsity Colonels glided through fifteen consecutive games without a loss and with a single tie away at Lake Forest Academy. Although the season climaxed when the Varsity Soccer team clinched the league championship, defeating Lake Forest 4-0, it was highlighted by the Colonels' twin home victories over state-ranked Gordon Tech. The second defeat of Gordon Tech enabled the team to advance to the third round of the State Soccer Tournament. There, they faced Evanston Township High school, ranked third in the state. Parker was unable to keep up with the powerful Wildkits of Evanston, losing 5-0; yet over two-hundred Colonel fans witnessed a super effort by this year's FWP varsity. Next year's team promises to be an even more powerful and dominant squad than this year's League Champions.

Field Hockey

New Players Learn Teamwork

Aside from providing the team with a chance to play other teams, Field Hockey provides the players with an opportunity to meet other people, to learn about them as well as about themselves. The sport is a group effort, where individuals learn to work together; from this develops a great amount of self-confidence and trust in others.

This year's Varsity team, coached by Pat Schaefer, ended its season with a 2 win, 8 loss record. The squad dominated its final game with a 3 to 1 victory over Lake Forest Academy and anticipates a successful 1982 season. Having many new players this year, the team experienced a time of learning and growing. It was not until the girls became more experienced that they learned to work together in every aspect as a team. Yet the team members all agree that the season was enjoyable, both the working and the learning; the fun of playing together, as well as the forging of new friendships.

Girls' Tennis

Team Captures League

This past year has been satisfying for the girls tennis team. Though they lost their first match, they retained their confidence. At the season's outset, Coach Mark Anderson instilled in them a drive and a desire to succeed; respect and team spirit increased among the team members. They proceeded to win each subsequent contest, tying with Latin for the championship of the league.

The regular season over, six members of the team competed in the district matches at Oak Park. Natasha King and Jennifer Greenwald played singles. Unfortunately, both were defeated by the second round. Shawn and Stacy Steponate competed in the doubles tournament, falling in the third round. The final set of doubles players, Jackie Goldenberg and Cessy Volen, continued to win and succeeded in qualifying for the State Tennis Tournament by making it to the district semi-finals. In the first round of the tourney, though, they fell at the hands of the fifth seed in Illinois. As a result of their sterling play throughout the 1981 tennis season, Jackie Goldenberg, Shawn and Stacy Steponate were voted members of the all-league team.

Colonels' Battle Height With Quickness

The Colonels' 1981-82 season could be characterized simply by inconsistencies and frequent individual stardom. Point production did not seem to be as much of a problem for the Colonels as were their everpresent cold spells during the first three minutes of a second half. Though lacking in size, the Colonels remained as physical as possible. Thus, in an attempt to move away from slow-paced half-court games, half court passes and defenses were used. Often, these strategies were successful against less disciplined teams. Yet, better coached teams utilized the Colonels' weaknesses in height and jumping ability. The Colonels had disappointing games against the two league leading teams, Latin and Elgin. In the traditional rivalry with Latin, the Romans soundly defeated Parker. Highlights of these intense games were the tremendous fan turnouts, the peanut gallery pyramids, and the scoring achievements of Michael Williams, Thirty-two points, and Tony Kahan, twenty-one points. Against Elgin, the Colonels failed to handle the inside game of their 6′8″ center and the leaping ability of their small forward, Wade Serfer.

Other highlights of the Colonels' season were its run-in with Central YMCA's Larry Jordan, thirty-nine points, one of the highest scorers in Chicago. Also, in the Thanksgiving tournament against U High, Tony Kahan held top scorer Arnie Duncan to nine points. In the Christmas Tournament at Greyslake, Colonel honors went to Jeff Berry who was the leading scorer of the tournament, twenty-six points, and made the all-tournament team, and to Mike Williams who was also one of the top three scorers of the tournament.

This is the first season the Colonels have been under .500 in a long time. Special thanks should go to all the members of the Colonels, who provided the school with exciting basketball, to Coach Steffens, and to all the cheerleaders. With only two Seniors leaving the squad next season, the Colonels should be in contention to bring the I.S.L.A. title home again.

Girls Brave Rough Season

Volleyball

Although volleyball is not one of Parker's most popular sports and the players don't get much recognition, they all agree that it was a worthwhile experience. "It did not really matter that we lost every game since we were getting along fine and we were learning more and more about our teammates," said a team member. The team started out with only two seniors and a majority of freshmen. They were inexperienced and, except for Captain Jenni Turner, they lacked basic skills. As the season went by, another senior joined the squad, players picked up skills and started to feel more confident about their game. The morale of the team was low when they travelled to Lake Forest to meet the Caxymen, one of the state's top teams. There, the Colonels, not intimidated by the screaming fans, threatened to end Lake Forest's winning streak by taking the first set. Unfortunately, Lake Forest roared back, spurred by its exchange students, and won the game. Often after that game, which turned out to be the highlight of the season, the Colonels came very close to victory, but luck just wasn't on their side.

The team would like to thank its coach, Chris Griffiths, for all the patience and the time she put into training the group. Next year is looked upon with hope and the certainty of a better record.

Girls' Basketball

Team Sets Win Record

The 1982 Girls' Varsity Basketball team got off to a slow start, losing their first four games. But after a road trip, the team roared back, winning their next four games against Morgan Park, Lake Forest, and two versus North Shore. With two more games left in the twelve game season, the varsity has already won more games than any Parker girls' basketball team in the past. Another highlight of the season was the victory against Lake Forest, the first in the team's history. The team is led by juniors Sandy Getzendanner, Julie Manushkin, and Sue Calvin and sophomores Tish Threet, Stephanie Scott, Martha Turner, and Judy Lurie. Freshmen Sarah Stenn and Justine Hedlund join them, providing support. Since there are no seniors on this year's team, the squad will not lose any starters next year. The team is hopeful and expects an even better record during the 1983 season.

A Funny Thing Happened to Us on the Way to Student Government

The 1982 Record is a joke! It has been ever since our comical election last May, when forty-eight hours before the Record election none of us had any idea that we were going to run together, especially Barry. Barry did not have even the most remote desire to have anything to do with the Record. What he did have was a combination of persuasive friends, hopes for a good senior yearbook, and insufficient time to think about his decision to run for editor. having been asked to run at 11:00 the night before the election, Barry had all of nine hours to think it over that night. The next day, with the triumvirate sealed, we could hardly keep from laughing as we walked on stage, carrying the platform we had finished during Leo's French class morning ex just before Student Government. But our joke was only beginning. It's so hard to believe now that that was less than a year ago.

Our first executive meeting, as well as every one thereafter, was held at the ever-popular My II. Of course nothing was ever accomplished there, but it always helped morale, a crucial outlet for three bossy editors with no staff to boss around. Developing a working relationship between the three of us was painfully and surprisingly difficult. While Leo was sure he knew the right way to do everything, Barry wanted to change everything he laid eyes on. The two always came head to head, and Lorenzo never failed to refuse to take a side.

But apart from internal clashes in style and policy, we encountered the darkroom problem, one so serious that we began to dread nearing the grungy corner we inhabited early in the year. For those of you who don't know it, the darkroom is where the school keeps its most ferocious animal, the scumbag. The scumbag has the bad habit of accusing innocent Record editors of stealing and breaking everything there is to steal and break. The less we saw of him, the better we got along, and as long as we were not underfoot he was very helpful and generous. One bright spot of darkroom work was the patient support and cooperation of Walter Kyles and especially Handy Walker, without whom we could never have finished this book.

The ideas we once had of a real staff now seem laughable daydreams, as the three of us sit here at 3:30 in the morning on the day our final shipment must be mailed, writing this article and desperately slapping together some of the most important pages of the book. We look at that "staff" picture in amazement; we never knew we had a staff. But looking at each of the people, we remember seeing all of them around at some time or other. A few who really came through for us though, were the artists, the hardest workers of them all, whose superior caricatures help make this year's senior section attractive.

Although no one is actually experienced enough to edit a book in 1983, we believe that through a spring supplement we will be able to point out the right path to follow for next year. Putting aside the future, we realise that memories of this year will always be with us. Things like all-nighters, the rush to get to the post office, the long hours in the office, and the loneliness when it's 7:00 and everyone else has already gone home won't be forgotten easily.

As our joke comes to an end, we look back and see that we had a hell of a time with our Record this year, you might even say a good time. Jokes died and we died laughing, preferring to have fun rather than to do the work which somehow always managed to be finished by deadline. The joke is what saved us from all the pressures, tension, and pettiness that could have destroyed us if we didn't have such a good sense of humor.

WHAT A BABY!

6-3-82
WHAT A PERSON!

Your days are short here.
This is the last of your springs.
And now, in the serenity
and quiet of this lovely place,
touch the depths of truth.
Feel the hem.
You will go away
with old good friends.
Don't forget, when you leave,
Why you came.

Jenni Kissed Me

Jenni kissed me when we met,
Jumping from the chair she sat in.
Time, you thief! Who love to get Sweets into your list, put that in.
Say I'm weary, say I'm sad;
Say that health and wealth missed me;
Say I'm growing old but add -
Jenni kissed me.

DAD - MOM - CHRIS

At Halloween you were a princess;
A rascal you have been in school;
In gym class you're a fragile tomboy;
A lifeguard you are at the pool.
We think your future will be happy;
Because you are a gem, a pearl;
But to your parents you will always
Be our suntan little girl.
We love you, come here often,

Mommy & Daddy

Mr. Dust,

Rarely does one find a person who can act as an advisor, teacher, partner, and companion. You have played all of those roles for me.

I will affectionately remember you as my mentor and my friend.

With great respect, thank you.

Fondly,

Robin

From here to eternity

To my friends, teachers, classmates, little brothers and sisters, and, of course, Mum:

I just wanted to thank you . . . for everything.

To my dearest friends who have been like sisters to me:

"Let us sit and talk awhile, be my friend, make me smile.
I just might stay the whole night through, talking, being friends with you. Sharing secrets, telling jokes, telling about each others folks, grinning about a short vacation, laughing, happy conversation.
Soon we'll go our separate ways, but we will meet again on some other days.
No matter what each day will send,
I hope you'll always be my friends."

Love you always,

Every man must think for himself, and he will always find upon his path some truth, or at least some kind of truth, that will help him through life; yet he dare not allow himself to drift; he must be self-controlled - mere naked instinct does not benefit a man.

Love of truth shows itself in this, that a man knows how to find and value the good in everything . . . and about truth there is an urgency that cries out for its application; for otherwise, it has no right to be there.

At certain epochs of our lives, we find ourselves in circumstances that, while they press upon us, and even seem altogether to weigh us down, at the same time give us the opportunity, nay, impose on us the duty to elevate ourselves, and by so doing fulfill the purpose of the Divine Being in our Creation.

— Goethe

The wisdom that my years at Parker have imparted to me resists definition. I have come, at least, to understand and evaluate some of what I encounter. I can only thank my family, and friends and this school for what they have given me - all of the opportunities to discover, to experience, and to grow.

Your humor and your patience made me laugh and smile, laugh, even if I couldn't understand why smile, even when you took the time to explain it.
I've been arrested by words, but not by feelings.

ROCKY,

The world turns around, new people grow up, and still the inhuman forces that society imposes against the individual are present. I believe that we can eliminate these evils through love and friendship.

Come into the mountains, dear friend, to seek out the beautiful things in the world so that you can use these positive forces to create a new and better world.

When you think about it we've done it all together. We've been to the Middle East to the Far West. From the farthest South to the Far North. On top of mountains and in deep valleys. And through the garbage those are the best times we could have had. And we did. I'll miss you when the good times come around because you could only make them better. Good luck I know you'll do well

Dreams

Hold fast to dreams
For if dreams die
Life is a broken-winged bird
That cannot fly.

Hold fast to dreams
For when dreams go
Life is a barren field
Frozen with snow.

WALSWORTH PUBLISHING COMPANY / MARCELINE, MISSOURI 64658

Dear Sarah,

I'm sorry we weren't in the same section this year. Hope you had a good year. Have a nice summer. Good luck in the play!

Your friend,
Julia Beale

Dear Sarah,

I hope you had a great year. It was fun being in the same section!

Have a great summer!
